MATLAB provides the ideal environment for mathematically sophisticated researchers, scientists, and engineers who need an environment that combines the world of programming with the world of mathematics. During summer quarter of 2011, the University of Wisconsin-Madison moved to a new AAMT-affiliated location, located on Wisconsin Avenue on the edge of campus. Matlab is a freeware package that is portable across most of the major operating systems. MATLAB is used in many areas of science, engineering, and industry. MATLAB runs on most operating systems. Zygotic expression of zebrafish otx5 precedes zygotic expression of retinoic acid-synthesizing enzymes genes. To analyse the potential function of the zygotic expression of otx5 gene in embryos, we designed a zygotic expression reporter gene system in zebrafish embryos. The reporter gene consists of the otx5 promoter driving the expression of a destabilized form of GFP and the destabilization domain derived from mouse ornithine decarboxylase. The otx5 promoter constructs were injected into zebrafish embryos at the 1-cell stage. At 3 days post-fertilization (dpf), GFP expression was detected in the otic vesicle, as well as in the brain, the eye and the somites. In situ hybridization results showed that GFP was co-localized in vomeronasal organ, pre-optic area, hippocampus, mesencephalon and diencephalon. GFP was also detected in the retina, pigmented epithelium of the eye, somites and muscle. Using three-dimensional time-lapse imaging, we observed that zygotic GFP expression in the brain and eye occurred earlier than in the retina or somites. At 6 dpf, GFP was also detected in the brain and retina, but not somites or muscle. Zygotic expression of retinaldehyde dehydrogenases, aldehyde dehydrogenase and retinoic acid synthase genes were also detected in zebrafish embryos. Co-localization of GFP with retinoic acid synthetase and aldehyde dehydrogenase suggested that the otx5 promoter is active in the retina. These results revealed that zygotic expression of the otx
