The new network is CBS Sports HQ, an over-the-top channel that has been licensed to 21st Century Fox and will be available to authenticated and authenticated premium subscribers through a variety of cable, satellite and telco providers. 20th Century Fox CEO and chairman James Murdoch said at CES last January that Fox was still "exploring a number of distribution options" for CBS Sports HQ, which will be a digital multicast feed, however, no cable provider has yet been announced. The channel will be available in 70 million U.S. homes that receive CBS Sports. That's a large audience, but more importantly, it's big enough to be interesting to cable operators. CBS had little to offer in basic cable in 2016–17 except its TV Everywhere-enabled channels — Showtime and CBS All Access — so this is a significant expansion of the basic offering. The sports network has 14 million cable subscribers in the U.S. CBS said a renewal of its deal with Viacom, which owns a minority stake in CBS, has yet to be finalized. For now, the CBS Sports HQ channel will be available to ABC, NBC and CW affiliates in markets that distribute those networks. Those nets will be able to run the channel on their networks via their local affiliate sales. Here's CBS' new cable schedule for 2017–18, which runs from Oct. 3, 2017 until June 30, 2018: The channel schedule reflects CBS' desire to gain more flexibility, particularly during football season, when other networks run special NCAA basketball and MLB games. The network carried special NCAA tournament games in 2016, but there will be none this year. The 2018 NCAA tournament will be delivered via CBS Sports Network, of course. Here's the channel lineup, which is subject to change as Viacom and Fox ba244e880a
