conventional methods of laying pipe, a trench is first excavated and then a pipe may be laid. But because a pipe has a wider diameter, when the trench is excavated, it must have a wide base to facilitate the widening of the pipe.

Consequently, the ground surface is permanently damaged in the vicinity of the trench. If the pipe must be installed in a road which is formed on the ground, a road must be cut to form a trench around the pipe and a long period of time is required to perform such work. If the trench is excavated, then a portion of the pipe material is left in the trench, and the portion of the pipe is undesirable for easy removal. Moreover, in the case of laying under water, the pipe which is installed in the ground is exposed to the outside and eventually corrodes with the result that the pipe is unserviceable. In addition, in the conventional methods, a pipe is laid by laying a plurality of pipes alternately along a longitudinal direction. But the length of the pipe is inevitably limited and it is difficult to install a longer pipe.

In order to overcome the problems as mentioned above, the applicant has invented the present invention, which will now be explained in detail. i install yahoo messenger on my wifi, when i got a call via yahoo messenger, i can't pick it up. if i install windows messenger, I could receive call. did you configure your AP on your computer so that y
