What are the most important innovations in the law and legal system in 2017? 2016 has been a significant year in the legal sector in terms of developments in the law and legal system, such as the advent of new technology, new concepts, and the addition of new ways of working and delivery.

Looking ahead at the developments that will be important over the coming 12 months, a number of law firms have been asking what is the most significant event in the law and legal system that will affect the way we do business in the future? For the past few years, the rise of the sharing economy has continued to generate a number of innovations in the law and legal system. While the sharing economy has been around for quite some time, it has recently seen unprecedented growth, which has changed the way we do business. It has been estimated that the total value of transactions conducted on the sharing economy in the UK will increase from £1.7 billion in 2014 to £4.9 billion in 2017, and estimates are that the number of unique participants will also increase from 14.6 million in 2014 to 18.9 million in 2017. As the sharing economy continues to grow and the use of online platforms becomes more widespread, so too will changes in the law and legal system to reflect the innovation and evolution of the sharing economy. It is important to know what is happening in the sharing economy now, and how it will change our lives for the better and for the worse. Current developments The advent of the sharing economy has seen an increasing amount of regulation introduced over the last two years to govern the sharing economy, to ensure the protection of consumers and regulation of the industry. Many platforms are still, however, unregulated, so the way that laws and regulations are enforced continues to evolve and keep the sharing economy in check. The sharing economy is also about more than just renting out your car, or being able to access and use other people's assets; it is also about making money. It is therefore also about ways of making money, such as remuneration for services in exchange for a share of the money. Payment by the
