Barely two years ago, Danny Brown had spent his entire year in the recording studio recording his second album XXX. At the time, the Detroit rapper told his fans that he was going to leave Foxboro and move to Detroit to focus on his second album. This led fans to believe that he was in the process of switching labels and thus changing his look and lifestyle. A year later, Danny Brown has announced that he will drop his first single from his upcoming album in the next few weeks. This has surprised many, as Danny Brown is not known for being a fan of releasing singles.

In a recent interview, Danny Brown revealed that he has been recording a new album that will be titled The Syringa Suite. The album will feature collaborations with artists like Eminem and The Weeknd, among others. “I ain’t never put out no album,” Brown said to Noisey about his upcoming album. “I’m about to drop this album called The Syringa Suite. This is one of the best albums I’ve ever made. I’ve been in the studio for a year and a half now. It’s crazy. We got all these features, some of which are from my new album. Some are from my first album.” Danny Brown seems to be back in a great place and the success of his latest album XXX made his 2d92ce491b
