. She just knew that he would do whatever he had to do to get what he wanted, even if he had to resort to force. He was rich and she was a poor country girl, but he had more money than she did. As he walked down the stairs of the house he frowned, and leaned against the wall. He just could not understand why he had spent so much time with her. She was a greedy, self-centered woman who was used to getting whatever she wanted, and he certainly was not going to give it to her. He was a greedy man as well, and the fact that she had put all her money in his bank account was a clear indication that she was easy. She was an independent, single woman, who didn't have anyone to support her, so she had put all her money in his bank account. He had no intention of using it to support her and she knew it. He had no idea what she thought of him, but she certainly didn't think that he was a good person. "Maybe you should put it on the counter so that everyone will see how much money is in your bank account," he told her as he stepped on the carpet. "What do you think I'm trying to do?" she asked angrily. "There's not a lot of money in my account, and I'm trying to use my money to help some people." "What people? I don't know who you are, and what you're doing to help them. I'll only use your money to help me and to feed myself," he informed her. "Well, the rich people who aren't as good as you are, and who will never be as rich as you are, have a shelter for people to go into," she explained, glaring at him as he walked away. "You can't take charity from people who have more than they know what to do with. I'm not a poor man, and neither are you. People like you who think they're such great people and never appreciate their money, should have what you have," he explained. "This isn't charity. It's helping people who are without money and have nowhere to go," she argued. "There are kids at the shelter that are in the same situation as those people. They need to feel safe, so I decided to donate the money I have in my bank account to help them." "Then why can't you do that f3e1b3768c
