Last year, the Chesterfield County Board of Supervisors approved a resolution calling for the "development of a museum and a memorial" to honor the Southern history of African Americans. Recently, the county was given $250,000 to build its "African American History Museum."There is much more to the story. Members of the board of supervisors received a letter dated November 1st, 2018 from none other than Chesterfield County Executive Tom Stith. It stated: "Pursuant to your [Board of Supervisors'] request of September 21, 2018, I am pleased to provide you with the initial proposal for a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between the Board and the Board of Trustees of the African American History Museum (AAHM). "The purpose of the MOU would be to develop a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) between the Board and the Board of Trustees of the African American History Museum (AAHM) in accordance with the desire and commitment of the Board of Supervisors to develop a cultural and educational museum and memorial to honor the Southern history of African Americans. You requested and the Board approved funding of $250,000 in order to develop the museum and memorial. The County Executive will take the next step and initiate the process to identify a developer to construct the museum and memorial."According to information obtained by the Chesterfield County NAACP, which was involved in the development of the memorial, the county was going to use the money for a project in Chesterfield County called the "African American History Museum & Memorial."The news was quickly picked up by a local news organization called the Richmond Times Dispatch. The newspaper reported that the memorial had been renamed the "African American History Museum & Memorial." In a follow-up report, the paper said the project would be developed by the "County Executive's Office of Cultural Affairs."Chesterfield's Communications Director, Charlie Smith, told the Richmond Times Dispatch that they were "too early to talk about the project," adding "As far as we know, there's no plan for a formal request to the county Board of Supervisors for funding."But he also added that "[t]he Board of Supervisors is aware of the project and is eager to pursue the project," and he "explained that Chesterfield County is working with the Board of Trustees of the [
