On one end of your board, drill a hole in the board so that it is approximately 10mm from the end, which will be the end of the guitar. On the other end of the board, drill a hole that is 10mm from the end, this hole will be for the end of the pick. When drilling a hole for the end of the pick, remember to drill a pilot hole first. It's okay if it goes through the board. If you use a pencil and a drill bit, this will allow you to drill the board easily. Once your board is drilled, stick a dowel or other stick in the end that is 10mm from the end. Bend the end of your dowel so that it's completely perpendicular to the edge of the board. Use something like a vice to clamp the dowel to the board, with a nut and a bolt, or a combination of two dowels. Once the dowel is secured, you can attach the end of your guitar to the dowel. Attach it so that it will sit on the end of the board. If you are using a sharpie, then just make sure to draw a line that is perpendicular to the board. The line is the length of your pick, and the spot where you want to place the end of the pick. Attach the end of your guitar to the board with a few screws (make sure that you attach it to the dowel, and not the board). Once this is done, screw the top of the guitar to the top of the dowel. Make sure that the guitar's neck is on the inside of the board. You can now test your guitar. If it's not great, then you can move on to the next step. If your guitar is excellent, then you can 2b92ce491b
