Download "The last few years have seen the rise of Mobile Device Management (MDM) solutions, with Samsung introducing its flagship ... MU (Management Utility) for Enterprise Management (EM), and Ericsson launching MINI-LINK as the core of a solution for BYOD and M2M scenarios. MINI-LINK, which was announced in 2013 at the Mobile World Congress, has now been used in 800,000 organizations worldwide and is used by more than 1 billion mobile devices every year.

The Ericsson solution is tailored for specific use-cases such as information consolidation and management of resources across an organization. Previously, mobile networks needed to install and maintain end-user appliances in order to securely manage and control devices.

However, MINI-LINK is portable and can be installed on any mobile network at a lower cost. Additionally, MDM solutions often require end-users to use tablets, and Ericsson claims that the MINI-LINK solution is suitable for managing desktops and laptops as well as tablets." MINI-

LINK implements a simplified MDM scheme which includes management functions for Android devices, Apple iOS devices, and Microsoft Windows devices. One can also install and manage resources across an organization, ranging from network devices, data center infrastructure, middleware and applications. The Ericsson solution can be used to control network resources and support subscriptions for both end-users and organizations. It can also be used to boost productivity for end-users in their day to day activities with secure access to applications, data and resources. Development for the solution is being handled by the leading technology companies Ericsson and Mobicom. Ericsson says that the solution will be commercially available by Q1 2017." Ericsson Mini
