A: Try =TRANSPOSE(SPLIT(A1, " ")) You could try this with the new version of Excel which should have a "Merge Cells" button. A: Thank you, all I had to do was: =concatenate("\r ",A1:A49) What's happening is that the CSV returned to me by Aruba cloud is in good form, so I'm using Matlab. Reading the manual of Aruba cloud, it says that the CSV is delimited by a single space, so I'm splitting it with the only space. Transcript for Video captures moment homeless couple gets eviction notice Hello I'm Maura share can we just on the do I. Our homeless couple just got a eviction notice and. You don't have to worry about that because when I got to their house to see how they live they you know. It is a great place and. They're doing it on a budget. Even though they're sleeping on the streets they're happy to be together and they told me they love each other. And they have a combined income of 250 dollars after all the cost of living and that's why they're so comfortable. And they don't wanna leave each other in this situation. Why would he just blow you know we got the notice for back rent and that went from the three. They saw they're homeless they decided to put together of course. I have a big problem and try and fix it because I am from that mean I understand the position they're in so that's why I'm gonna start. Defying the eviction notice that's.
