These organizations, together with specialized ministries and various public organizations, conduct research on the industrial and economic situation and develop proposals aimed at improving the situation in the industrial sphere. The projects carried out by these organizations affect all areas: production, resources, production of new products, distribution, regulation, functioning of industrial units. In 1976, the National Industrial Development Association (NIA) was established. It includes numerous organizations that provide assistance to the industry through research projects, financial support or the supply of equipment. This Committee includes the Managing Directors of leading industry associations and unions, including representatives of companies carrying out industrial development projects. See National Association for Industrial and Economic Development (NAID). Industry and entrepreneurship Modern industry has a great development dynamics, which is due to a set of prerequisites, the main of which are: in the 70s. 20th century the rapid development of the Indian economy and the entry of industrialized countries into the world market made it necessary to accelerate the development of the industrial goods themselves and increase the profits of industrial enterprises. The increase in production and profitability of the industrial business led to a reduction in working hours for industrial workers and was the cause of the industrial revolution in India. Almost all large industrial associations now have auxiliary productions, some of them work part-time. At the same time, the industrial sector continues to occupy a leading position in the level of mechanization and automation of production processes
