trying to get more familiar with Magento 2 and one of the things I was wondering about was what is the difference between .org and .dev versions of a site. Are they both considered a live site?

A: .org is the standard version of your site, it's the live version.

.dev is the version you are developing, it's the version you are testing, you can never directly push to .dev when developing, so it's only used when you are ready to deploy your site to production. The two versions are different versions of the same site, .org and .dev are simply two (sub)directories under a single site. The .org directory does not store anything, it is for Magento to keep track of some information about your site, that is why we can safely delete it if we want. The .dev directory is used for deployment, it is an empty directory that should not be touched when developing and testing. Humble

Square The Humble Square is a small market square in the centre of the town of Rugby, Warwickshire, England. The square was established in 1662, as part of a larger development which was intended to replace the medieval town of Rugby, with a new town square.

Although work did start in the square in 1667, the square was not completed until the 18th century. History The town of Rugby was established in 1067, and developed further during the Middle Ages, becoming a major political, administrative and economic centre in the West Midlands region. A number of town walls existed around the town, although they were mostly demolished in the 16th and 17th centuries. The medieval wall was removed in the 1660s, and large areas were reclaimed for building. The Humble Square was the first public work completed in 1662, with the erection of the statue of King Charles II. In the early 1660s, Charles II made a number of alterations to Rugby, including the construction of the Humble Square. Rugby's growth continued during the 18th century, and a number of new buildings were constructed in the Humble Square, including the Old Library. In the early 18th century, a number of buildings were demolished
