Consequently, this study draws on the interview and observational data collected during the first part of the project to present the first part of a preliminary and exploratory analysis of the conceptualisation, attitudinal and behavioural elements of the concept of media citizenship, with particular reference to the work of jurisprudence and the case law of the European Court of Human Rights. In this regard, the next section presents the research approach followed in the project with particular emphasis on the method of the study. Comunicacionsociadadymediosantillanapdf13 pdf 2015 Sivasa Rajan. However, over time, the concept and practice of media citizenship has evolved. The case of media citizenship is highly relevant to the study of social change and reform. The concept of media citizenship has not been widely explored in the literature. The research is especially relevant in the light of the critical debate on democratic communication systems. In particular, the paper examines the relationship between the convergence and divergence of media citizenship as seen in the policies of freedom of expression and information of the Member States of the European Union (EU). It also addresses the issue of whether media citizenship as a form of citizenship has been and still is pertinent as a concept for media systems. The paper also considers the views of the individual Member States on citizenship and citizenship in the context of their relationship with media systems. This study presents an overview of different theoretical positions. In particular, the paper explores the relationship of media citizenship to issues of language and the relationship between nation and citizenship. It also draws upon the work of previous authors to highlight the ways in which the concept of media citizenship has developed and evolved in the scholarly and media literature.

comunicacionsociadadymediosantillanapdf13 A preliminary and exploratory analysis is carried out to examine the possible ways in which media citizenship can be understood and conceptualised. The study will be made up of two parts. The first part will be to examine the concept of media citizenship. This part of the study forms the basis for part two, which will explore the nature of this concept. Part one of the study would comprise of an analysis of the concept of citizenship through an examination of the concept of public service and political rights. The theoretical framework and methods used would be based on the work of previous authors who have explored the concept of citizenship and its relationship to 3e33713323
