Today's tech might be crazy and complicated, but that doesn't mean it has to be hard to understand. That's why we've tried to simplify the things you need to know about today's high-end phones. 5 Photos Huawei has big shoes to fill after the P20 and P20 Pro, and its new P30 series has won us over with its very positive camera performance, sleek design, and good overall quality. The P30 Pro, on the other hand, has a few minor niggles, but all in all, this is a strong phone that will show you how to use Google's Pixel 3 camera magic. The Google Pixel 3, for those who aren't aware, is a five-month-old phone that beat the iPhone XS and the Samsung Galaxy S10 Plus to the top of our list. It's the very definition of what a smartphone should be: attractive, well-built, fast, and full of great features. And it costs under $600. That's not bad at all, and it's a bargain if you're planning to upgrade. The Huawei P30 Pro, on the other hand, is a great choice for those who are looking for an affordable top-tier experience. It has most of the power and features you'll need to tell the Google Pixel 3's camera magic a clean-up. It's a bit more expensive, but you can't find many alternatives that deliver as much power for your money. If you want the best from both these phones, you could get the Huawei P30 Pro, but you can also get the best of both worlds with the Google Pixel 3 and Huawei Mate 20 Pro. Who doesn't want the best photography experience they can get with a smartphone? It's about as good as it gets, and even though it's the Google Pixel 3's camera that's winning people over, the Huawei P30 Pro is a good alternative. There are much better options if you want to get the full Pixel 3 experience, though. Design The P30 Pro looks pretty great, if you ask us. It's Huawei's best-looking phone yet, and it's a lot more detailed and refined than what we were used to in the past. You won
