I want to create a macro that takes a sequence of forms and returns a macro which takes a sequence of forms and returns the combination of the first two elements of the sequences: (defmacro and (&forms) `(doall (fn* [~@forms])))) The following code doesn't work, of course: (and [1 2 3] [4 5 6] [7 8 9]) Can this be done with macros? A: The doall is not the correct macro for a solution to this problem. The doall will call whatever sequence of forms you give it with the correct side-effect of returning the result. In this case you want a comprehension macro, a macro which will allow you to return the result of a sequence of forms, and you want it to produce the result of those forms rather than call them with doall.
