Ampare Error Box Free

Ampare Error Box allows you to play harmless pranks to your friends, by creating an error window that appears on their screen. While the dialog box resembles a Windows Explorer error window, the message displayed on it can easily be modified. Persistent error box Ampare Error Box is a simple to use utility that allows you to create error windows on the desktop, with a custom message. The program does not require installation, which is why it can easily be copied to your friends' computers so that you can play them a practical joke. While the first impact on whoever views the result can be confusing, the error box is harmless and the custom message can reveal the source of the dialog. The program can display several instances of the same box, in order to simulate a critical system error or a malicious process running. A program that runs and hides Ampare Error Box can run in the background as soon as you set the custom message. The shortcut buttons F11 and F12 can activate, respectively deactivate the display of the error box. Moreover, you can insert any message you wish, instead of the error notification. The display of the error boxes makes it impossible for users to read the message until the last window stabilizes on the desktop. The error dialog resembles the explorer.exe window, which can occur in real life and indicate a serious system problem. Make a harmless practical joke Ampare Error Box allows you to play a simple, yet effective prank to your friends, without requiring serious preparation. All you need to do is copy it onto your friend's computer, run it and insert the custom message. Let it run in the background, then when the user presses the F11 key, the error boxes are instantly activated.
