We report a patient with a history of Graves' disease and progressive dry eye syndrome who had been referred for evaluation and management of her autoimmune orbitopathy. The patient was a 56-year-old woman who presented with a history of rapidly progressing proptosis, left-sided internuclear ophthalmoplegia, and metamorphopsia. Her history included ocular symptoms of severe dry eyes and dryness and burning of the mouth for 12 months. A detailed ophthalmic examination revealed severe bilateral dry eyes with Schirmer's tear test values of 5 and 3 mm/5 minutes and unanesthetized Schirmer test values of 9 and 6 mm/5 minutes in the right and left eyes, respectively. Bilateral mild exotropia of 10 to 15 prism diopters without diplopia was observed. The patient was seen by us on three separate occasions for periodic updates and initiation of oral plasmapheresis for the management of autoimmune thyroid ophthalmopathy. Two sessions of oral pl
