A chocolate cake is any cake where chocolate is the main ingredient. The most common varieties of chocolate cake are chocolate sponge cake, chocolate-chip cake, chocolate-chocolate cake, chocolate angel food cake, and chocolate brownie cake. Chocolate cakes are usually baked in a round or square tin with a simple filling. They can be frosted with chocolate or with a simple sugar glaze, and are often topped with icing. Chocolate cakes can be decorated with chocolate icing, or powdered sugar, or nuts and sometimes even jelly. They can also be baked in a form resembling a loaf. They are usually baked in ovens, although they may also be baked in a microwave oven. Here are some popular chocolate cakes: Chocolate sponge cake is the classic chocolate cake, and is usually associated with Valentine's Day. It is not the original chocolate cake, but is thought to have been invented in the 19th century in London and is believed to have become popular in America when used as the basis for chocolate layer
