Forget your boring old email todo list. Gmail Notebook is now available in the Windows Store, and it's unlike anything we've seen in the Windows app store before. Yes, you can already use Gmail Notebook on your computer, but what's exciting about the Windows Store version is that you can do this from the lockscreen of your phone, tablet, or laptop, and you can even share your notes to any other devices, all while still being able to access your inbox as usual. With Gmail Notebook, you can create text-based notes that look and feel like the Gmail web interface—with the ability to easily attach images, and even create and save new notes and drafts. You can even read your notes in the Gmail mobile app, on your desktop, or in the Windows Store web client! Note that this isn't something that's just for email; the basic system also works with files, lists, and URLs. You can also share your work
