What's New in the Photoshop 2022 (Version 23.1)?

Q: Using JQuery if statement to add class based on if in the HTML I have a button that is meant to open an invisible file dialog. I am trying to add a class to the button to toggle the visibility based on whether or not the file dialog is currently visible. If it's visible, it should add the.invisible class, and if it's not, it should remove the class. This is what I have right now:

```
$(document).ready(function() {
$("#openStuff").on("click", function() {
$(".class_I_need").toggleClass("invisible");
if($(".class_I_need").is(":visible")) {
$("#myFile").css('display','block'); } else {
$("#myFile").css('display','none'); } }); }); Hello, World
Click Me So what it does right now is it adds the class to the div, but only adds it if the file dialog is currently open. If the file dialog is not open, it removes the class. What I need it to do is add the class to the button when the file dialog is open, and add the class to the button when it is closed. A: You can just toggle the visibility of the dialog with the open and close functions:

```
$("#myFile").css('display','none');
$(".class_I_need").show(); $(document).ready(function()
{ $("#openStuff").on("click", function() {
$("#myFile").css('display', 'none');
$(".class_I_need").show(); }); }); #myFile {
```
