What's New in the AlacrityPC?

AlacrityPC is a free program for Windows XP/Vista/7 that can help you get more out of your computer. The software starts or stops applications according to user-defined profiles that determine the priority of each application when a user runs one. This, in turn, means that the software can reduce system load or speed up a program. This free software also provides other features that can help you to speed up your computer: after you launch a program, it can be started or stopped manually to allow the program to access resources it needs. You can also display the desktop wallpaper or shut down your computer, after a user program has been launched, so you don't have to go through the hassle of rebooting the machine. With the software, you can also defragment the Windows RAM and restart the Windows GUI to give the system a much needed boost. AlacrityPC: Easier Than Switching Profiles Even though AlacrityPC can help you by automatically monitoring the running programs and start or stop them when an application is launched, you have to be quite technical in order to create a profile that will work best for you. The software also features an intuitive interface that allows you to apply a profile easily and it is possible to configure how the programs should be launched before and after a user-specified application. This can be done by setting up an order of operations for the programs that run before and after launching the program you want to optimize. AlacrityPC is easy to use and install, but you may have to go through the manual and play around with the settings to make sure it works as you want it to. This is also the case when you want to create a profile, but we found it quite difficult to find the relevant settings in the manual and even less so to understand what they do. Pros The software is easy to use and install, which is a good thing for those who are not necessarily experienced users. AlacrityPC allows you to create custom profiles and trigger the application and services you need when a program is launched. The software can automatically restart/shutdown your computer after a user program has been launched. AlacrityPC has the ability to defragment your Windows RAM and restart the Windows GUI. The software has a handy logging feature that can help you figure out what went wrong when creating and editing profiles. The software supports Windows Vista and allows you to control programs that require elevated rights. The software can be downloaded for Windows XP, Vista and 7. The software is relatively easy to get started with and doesn't require extensive technical knowledge to get it working properly. The software can also be accessed from your mobile device. Cons The software doesn't support Windows Vista 32-bit, so you cannot use it on a 32-bit installation of Vista. The software does not support Windows XP 32-bit
