In this chapter, we provide information on the different parts of the Layers panel. To save your image, you simply flatten your image to a single layer. You can also use the Layers panel to do the following: * Create a new document * Upload and manage images * Add text * Change settings * Convert image files to other file formats * Open, save, and print a document * Export photos to the Web * Edit an existing document ## The Layers Panel Photoshop's Layers panel enables you to quickly create and manage layers for images. A new document can contain any number of layers, but you can switch the display back and forth between them as needed. To create a new document, you click the New Layer icon on the Layers panel. To create a layer, select a layer from the Layers panel and click the New Layer button at the bottom of the Layers panel, as shown in Figure 1-1. FIGURE 1-1: When you click the New Layer button at the bottom of the Layers panel, Photoshop creates a new layer. To delete a layer, click the trash can icon and then click the Delete Layer button. You can select multiple layers and remove them simultaneously, making your job a lot easier. Select the layer you want to delete and drag it into the trash can to remove it from the document. You can also right-click a selected layer and choose Remove Layer from the pop-up menu. The Layers panel can be composed of an unlimited number of layers. The order of these layers is important. The effect of the horizontal jaw displacement on the stability of the restorations and marginal bone of endodontically treated teeth. This study was undertaken to determine the effects of the horizontal displacement of the restoration and marginal bone of endodontically treated teeth restored with an occlusal cervical sealer and two resins. Twelve partially edentulous patients were treated endodontically. Teeth (N = 108) were divided in two groups: 34 teeth with a complete bony defect (test group) and 74 teeth with a complete bony defect and a complete cervical defect (control group). The teeth were restored using a split-mouth design. The restorations were placed on a laboratory model which mimicked a clinical situation. The posts were cemented with PAN (Panavia 21) cement. The test group teeth were further divided into two subgroups: Group 1 teeth were displaced horizontally on one occlusal surface of the crown by 50 microns; Group 2 teeth were displaced horizontally on both occlusal surfaces of the crown by 50 microns. Standardized radiographs were taken before treatment, at placement of the post, at cementation of the crown and 1-3 months after cementation of the crown. The radiographs were examined regarding marginal bone loss on the first, second and third posts (mesial, distal and buccal) and the relative position of the restorations. No marginal bone loss was found in the control group or in Group 1. In Group 2, marginal bone loss was found in 7.5% of the occlusal surfaces: 1.6% mesial and 5.7% distal (P
