Q: Why do Jews love the prophet Isaiah so much? I've heard many times Christians are quick to call Jews and most of all the ultra-orthodox Jews "idolaters" because Jews worship a few particular books and prophets. At first this was hard for me to understand. But recently, reading more about Judaism, I've realized why Jews hate idolatry so much. Jews don't worship idols, they rather worship Jewish books as Jews do. Books such as Torah, Zohar, Talmud, Midrashim. It's especially the prophets Isaiah and Joel that stand for a lot to Jews. Why is it that way? What specifically can Jews gain from the study of Isaiah and Joel? A: The Kabbalah refers to the Torah as "the Divine Language" because it is written in the Divine Light. Isaiah holds a unique place in Jewish thought because his prophecy is at once "Word from God" and "Word for us". His prophecy is a direct conversation between the Divine and the individual. The individual receives revelation/manifestation of God's will, while God will likewise be seen as a more concrete form of Divine revelation. The two are not separate but one and the same. G-d is directly accessible to the individual, as it is our destiny to receive/receive revelation in the process of returning the Divine Neshamah ("Soul") to its true path. The key is to grow in our relationship with G-d. Even non-Jews are able to do this, through forms of prayer (such as calling by name, or framing a prayer as an "audition" to be answered and contained in the Divine Light). The goal in our relationship with G-d is to become like G-d. Isaiah speaks to the individual in a very concrete way, in a way that any being might hear. It is G-d himself, directly, who reveals Himself to the individual and that is our destiny: to know G-d directly. The reason we study the prophets is to gain understanding of the Divine Light that is written into the Torah. As a commenter
