Femoral shaft fractures in childhood: a systematic review of management and outcome. To review the methods of management of children with femoral shaft fractures and the outcomes associated with these. PubMed and CINAHL databases were searched from the beginning of each database to the end of January 2018 for the following terms: "child", "femur", and "fracture". The inclusion criteria were (a) the study involved patients who were less than 18 years of age; (b) they had suffered a femoral shaft fracture; and (c) the study was a case report, review, or systematic review. The exclusion criteria were (a) reviews of the literature, except descriptive, narrative reviews; (b) studies that investigated pediatric distal femoral fractures and not femoral shaft fractures; (c) studies that reported on only proximal femoral or tibia fractures. Twenty-one articles met the inclusion criteria. Operative stabilization was the most common management method and gave good clinical results. Physiotherapy was provided in six articles and it promoted restoration of range of motion (ROM) and muscle strength, which in turn promoted early ambulation. Adequate pain management techniques were provided in two articles and were found to be effective in preventing stiffness and in promoting return to activity. The management of femoral shaft fractures in children is multifactorial. For optimal outcome, an individualized management plan should be used. Further systematic reviews, both on the management and outcome of femoral shaft fractures, are required to develop an evidence-based management guideline. Level V, systematic review of Level IV and Level V studies.

Q: How to pass multiple Lists to a Controller? I am building a Dynamics GP App for one of our customers using Managed Dynamics 365 Connector. I don't have the luxury of building it myself so I am trying to replicate what they have written. What I am trying to do is call a separate function (or page) every time someone saves a particular record. Here is my action in my controller class // Get all values from the request List
