Multi-platform LAN-Solutions for IT professionals lan-secure LAN-Solutions for all your Windows servers and workstations in IT environments is a responsibility that leaves no room for approximation, and that is reason enough to resort to a software solution when trying to be in control of all your assets running Windows Management Instrumentation service. This does exactly the same thing, but it does it as good as it gets. A regular user will feel like he/she/it is working in a house, he/she/it is nice, clean, he/she/it has no blisters, you can see you have nothing to worry about. The only thing that is a little annoying is that on the top left, you can see the "lan-secure inventory center logo". However, you have the choice to go without it, you will see everything, but you will have a much more "dirty" look on it. Multi-platform LAN-Solutions for IT professionals lan-secure LAN-Solutions for all your Windows servers and workstations in IT environments is a responsibility that leaves no room for approximation, and that is reason enough to resort to a software solution when trying to be in control of all your assets running Windows Management Instrumentation service. First off, it is worth noting that the application sports a clutter-free GUI organized into several sections, namely "Home," "Scan," "Report," and "Tools." The first on the list acts as a dashboard offering general info about the scanning operations you have carried out as well as the status of each and every one of them. As for the "Scan" window, it is where you need to go in order to make an inventory of your computers, with the possibility of selecting the method you want to adopt. You may scan a specific computer if you provide its name or IP address, multiple PCs from a list, devices from an IP address range, or machines from a domain or workgroup. Regardless of your approach, all your PCs are listing along with their IP address and the date of the most recent scan. The data you are provided with includes computer and system details, programs, devices, processes, services, updates, and much more. What's more, command execution, syslog notifications, email forwarding can be handled with the help of this tool, with the

What's New In Lan-Secure Inventory Center Enterprise?

Ever felt the need to know what is happening on your company's LAN? Ever tried to get up to speed on information that is stored by your organization on your workstations and servers? Ever wished for something like a real-time LAN statistics report? The Lexmark Imaging Business (www.lexmark.com) has named one of its top employees, Mike Mathews, as vice president of engineering. In this newly created role, Mathews will be responsible for the overall design, development, and deployment of Lexmark's Imaging solutions. "Mike Mathews is the perfect choice to join the Lexmark Imaging team," said Stephen B. Schnell, Lexmark president and CEO. "In his almost 25 years at Lexmark, he has played a vital role in growing our imaging business. His deep expertise, broad knowledge of our products, and extensive network of contacts will be critical in leading Lexmark Imaging to a successful new era." Mathews joins Lexmark from Datalink Systems, where he served as vice president of engineering, leading the product teams that developed Datalink's state-of-the-art archival solutions for the computer industry. Prior to Datalink, Mathews held a number of positions with Lexmark, including vice president of engineering, senior director of engineering, and director of engineering. He has also held engineering positions at other leading companies, such as OCLC, and Johnson & Johnson. "I'm excited to work for Lexmark," said Mathews. "Our products and services will be relevant, valuable, and much better than they were before. The leadership at Lexmark has a history of developing innovative products, and I'm confident they'll continue this tradition. We'll leverage our technology leadership to further extend our products' life cycles, as well as extend our competitive position in this growing market." The University of North Carolina has acquired the ownership of Brandeis University Press, publisher of the prestigious Computer Science Journal and winner of an annual Best Published Paper Award. The research arm of the university, the Technology Management Services, will now own and manage the publishing operations of Brandeis University Press as part of its existing work in scholarly communication. The acquisition represents a new direction for the Brandeis Press. TM Services will provide editorial, production, production management and marketing services to the presses and journals, and will be headquartered at UNC-Chapel Hill. The two presses, which share offices in Brandeis University's Josiah Bartlett Research and Writing Building, will continue to operate as independent presses, with separate editorial staffs. Brandeis will continue to have its own identity and separate board of trustees. Brandeis University Press, founded in 1971, publishes over 25 titles in the computer science and technology fields.
