It's a standard implementation of a text parser and a generator of copyright notices for C/C++ and C# projects. It's similar to C/C++ Copyright Generator. @arrayinfo_09@ @arrayinfo_09@ GPL-It is a free and open-source application that facilitates a user-friendly interface for adding GPL or other types of copyright notices to your source files. Prerequisites and interface It's not wrapped in a setup package, so you can save the downloaded files to a custom location on the disk or copy them to a USB flash drive, in order to run the tool on any machine. However, .NET Framework must be installed. It doesn't modify your system registry settings or create files on the disk without asking for your permission. When it comes to the interface, GPL-It adopts a standard .NET Framework form and keeps all options neatly organized. Set project details to generate copyright notices After indicating your project's root directory, you can create a list with extensions to add, load existing headers from plain text documents, as well as copy and save headers. Notices can be generated by entering the project's name, description, author and year. There's also a template available but you can change any parts of it, as well as insert tags with the previously mentioned project properties. Any text can be selected and copied to the Clipboard. There are no other notable options available here. Evaluation and conclusion We haven't come across any stability issues in our tests, thanks to the fact that the program didn't freeze, crash or indicate error messages. It left a small footprint on the overall performance of the computer, since it needed a low amount of CPU and memory to work properly. On the other hand, GPL-It is an unpolished software application that hasn't been updated for a long time. Nevertheless, it gets the job done and you can test it for yourself, since it's free and open-source. GPL-It Description: It's a

If the proposed set of emission standards ends up in the Legislature this year, it would be the first time that car manufacturers have been put on the hook for common-mode emissions of nitrogen oxides and carbon monoxide. As reported recently by the Beacon Journal, manufacturers estimate a $10 billion hit to profits if the standards are passed. They are now arguing that the standards, which will apply to new, larger and more powerful vehicles in the state starting in 2025, should be delayed.

House Bill 571, filed by Rep. Ron Tallon, R-Saukville, would shift the burden of proof from the state to car manufacturers proving that their vehicles don't emit excess pollution to the manufacturer proving that they do. Automakers say the rule shift is unfair to them. The bill also states that manufacturers should have the flexibility to produce as much fuel-efficient pollution-free vehicles as possible, and could even set fuel efficiency standards for them. An Oregon legislator recently proposed the opposite. A bill passed in Oregon required cars to meet emissions standards, while setting a target of an average fuel efficiency of 55 mpg by 2025, noting that cars that were less fuel-efficient than that would have to pay a surcharge. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency calls for comparable standards for all cars, while also setting a goal of 55 mpg by 2025. Vermont, New York, Oregon and California are also proposing more stringent measures on emissions. Massachusetts and Hawaii also have proposed laws but haven't received final
