Advanced glycation end products (AGEs) are nonenzymatically formed compounds found in aging and diabetic patients. In a mouse model of squamous carcinoma, K14Cre-Wnt1 tumor cells, AGEs contribute to the development of the cancer. RAGE is a receptor for AGEs. We examined expression of RAGE in the K14Cre-Wnt1 squamous tumor cells and compared it to expression in normal murine keratinocytes. We found that RAGE expression was upregulated in the tumor compared to the normal keratinocytes. 1cb139a0ed
