MAPK activation is a predominant early event in cell death associated with iron loading in human lung fibroblasts. Ferritin is overexpressed in interstitial fibrosis of the lung, a disease in which the disease hallmark is deposition of iron in lung fibroblasts. Because accumulation of iron is associated with an increase in cell death, the purpose of this study was to examine the mechanism by which iron loading results in cell death. Human lung fibroblasts were incubated with 1 microg/ml Apoferritin and ferric ammonium citrate for 1 to 6 days. Cell death was quantified by analysis of the amount of DNA released from dying cells. Lysates were analyzed by immunoblotting for activation of Jun N-terminal kinase (JNK), p38, and ERK2 MAP kinases. Apoferritin loading of lung fibroblasts caused a concentration-dependent cell death with maximal killing occurring by day 3. Apoferritin loading resulted in activation of the JNK, p38, and ERK2 MAPKs. Inhibition of JNK blocked cell death by Apoferritin
