This is the program I used when I was in elementary school. Not the best thing to use when you had to write a feature article on a specific subject. All you had to do was type in the URL for the feed you wanted to use. Then when you were done with the article, you could either type in a link back to the article, or, if the article had multiple authors, you could submit it to Ithink. Once you picked the link, you could chose to post it on your blog. It allowed you to do all of this without a blog or any software in back of you. If you didn't want to write your own article, you could always use the program to make you a new article which allowed you to specify the date. This was very handy when you wanted to write a paper for class and it wasn't due for another week. You could open up the program, type in your topic, and basically get right to work. The program then let you type in the URL for the feed that you wanted to read. Then if you wanted to write your own article, you could do so without getting on your computer. All you had to do was click on the paper icon and type in your information. Once you were finished, you could submit it to Ithink and in a few seconds, you could view your article on the site. It was all pretty cool back in the day, but I can't imagine what it would be like today if we still had the program. Comments (214) Hi, i have checked the Portable RSS Xpress review and tried to use it myself, by installing and running the tool on my laptop. I can not find a way to remove it either install it with removing the program and retry the review, or running as portable. So I assume you can not download it and try it on your own installation unless if you have made it portable before. So you are right, i am just trying to find out if there is a way to make it portable to use it on different computers. Thanks for your reviews. Outstanding Xpress! Can't believe i have not found this before! I have been using the tool for a while now and I am very pleased! P.S. Portable RSS Xpress can be found here: Is there any version of Portable RSS Xpress that I can run on a virtual machine? I can't seem to be able to make Portable RSS Xpress run on my VM. I tried to follow all the instructions on how to make it portable, but there is no option to make it portable. Interesting tool! Thank you for the detailed review and the tool is impressive. I can be very useful for people who like to
