A: You're seeing the Unofficial Web Server running on port 80, which happens to be what PHP uses as its default web server (in fact, it is the same server as your own web server). The phpinfo page in your browser should tell you the name and version of your PHP installation, so you should be able to find out what your PHP version is and delete the unofficial web server entry. Short- and long-term weight gain and mortality risk in hemodialysis patients. Anemia and chronic inflammation with oxidative stress and insulin resistance are the main factors associated with chronic diseases in uremia. Previous evidence suggests a relevant role for these proinflammatory factors in atherosclerosis and all-cause and cardiovascular mortality risk in end-stage renal disease (ESRD). Increased weight gain is associated with higher all-cause mortality risk in the general population. We assessed whether body mass index (BMI) and weight gain are associated with risk of all-cause and cardiovascular death in ESRD patients. The study cohort consisted of 967 hemodialysis patients of a single center. Patients were followed up for up to 8 years (3119 patient-years). BMI was categorized as normal, overweight, and obese, and weight gain was defined as a weight change between years 0 and 2 and 0 and 4. There were no significant associations between BMI and all-cause and cardiovascular mortality. Positive associations were observed between increasing weight gain and all-cause and cardiovascular mortality risk. Patients with weight gains at 2 and 4 years tended to be older, and they had higher incidence of diabetes and cardiovascular diseases. The highest risk of all-cause mortality was observed in overweight and obese patients with weight gain at year 4 (HR 3.03,  $p = 0.0011$ ). We found that the strongest association was observed in overweight patients with weight gain at year 4 (HR 3.71,  $p = 0.0016$ ). This is the first study demonstrating the relevance of weight gain and BMI categories in patients on dialysis as an indicator of all-cause and cardiovascular mortality risk.
