What's New In?

Can you really change your desktop wallpaper automatically? Yes, with this nifty utility. Auto Wallpaper Changer is a lightweight application designed specifically for helping you change your desktop wallpaper automatically. It can be deployed on all Windows versions out there. Plain design The tool does not make a very good impression in the visual department. Not all of the program's configuration parameters are displayed correctly in the main window so it's pretty difficult to guess their exact function. You cannot appeal to a help manual to read more about the configuration process so you need to experiment with the dedicated parameters in order to learn how to tweak them. Wallpaper settings Auto Wallpaper Changer makes use of an Explorer-like layout for helping you browse throughout the files stored in your computer. The utility works with the following file formats: BMP, JPEG, and WMF. The wallpaper is automatically changed when you reboot your computer or once a day. When you click on a certain folder, the tool automatically shows the photos stored the current directory. They are revealed in a simple list. You cannot view extra details about each picture, only the filename and extension. What's more, you are allowed to preview the images directly in the main window and select the ones that you want to be used as wallpapers. In addition, you may delete photos from the list. Auto Wallpaper Changer is not a resource hog so you do not have to worry that it hampers your computer's performance. You can keep it running in the background. However, it has not been updated for a long time so you may experience compatibility issues and all sorts of bugs on newer operating systems like Windows 8 and Windows. Windows 7's famous rolling update project had a new preview tool release yesterday. Microsoft's Notepad team has created a brand new notepad named Notepad++, or popularly known as Npp. This is the first and the only text editor developed by Notepad team that's free and open source, running under an MIT license. Notepad++ has features that are similar to Notepad, but it is more popular in Windows 7 and Windows 8. It has everything that a text editor should have, from syntax highlight, to code completion, to using coding standards, to fold, to drag and drop code blocks and so on. Here are some awesome features you can try out right now, you may even try them out right now and test drive. Syntax highlighting - you can
