A USB Flash drive is an indispensable part of any PC user's life. It can be used to store all your personal files as well as to install a lot of applications and games. As a consequence, a USB Flash Drive can act as a hardware wallet for your money, can contain antivirus solutions or even allow you to make online payments. Most of the applications and games that are available in the app store are compatible with USB Flash Drives, so you don't need to worry about them being unreadable if you lose them. The great thing about USB Flash Drives is that they have a fixed capacity of about 128GB or more. With this in mind, you will be able to store a lot of files that you want to protect. For any USB Flash Drive, compatibility with computers is crucial. They cannot be added to a PC, so you need to know whether the computer you have will be able to recognize them, load them and even read them. It's important to understand that USB Flash Drives can come in different shapes and sizes, and you should make sure that the size and shape that you order matches the size and shape of the computer you have.
