It is known to use a tape-like material to hold a seedling together in a nursery bed until it is planted. Also, sheet plastic is commonly used as a propagation medium in the nursery bed, and this plastic is made sticky or tacky so that the seedling will adhere to the plastic sheet. Finally, it is known to use a high polymer film as a nursery bed material because of its high porosity, and when the film becomes wet it becomes sticky. Unfortunately, neither of these known methods produces a seedling with the top branches of a tree when planted. That is, the seeds cannot be planted with branches already attached to them.In general, service providers are interested in knowing the location of users of their networks, i.e. their current location, their current session location, or user presence, etc. and of the corresponding resources such as devices, servers, etc. located at the user's current session location. Currently, user location can be tracked by interacting directly with the corresponding devices (e.g. using the Global Positioning System 3e33713323
