The Internet may seem like a great place where we can easily share information, movies, music, and other goodies. Unfortunately, it's also the place where cybercriminals use every trick in the book to get their hands on our personal information. Luckily, modern day security software can help us keep our computers safe from those who would do us harm. These days, almost any company that produces a computer will have a suite of security software installed on the system. This software is often built into the operating system, making it a vital part of any computer, laptop, or server. If you're wondering whether or not you need to use internet protection software, it's good to know that every company that sells a computer also sells some form of internet security software. That means that every computer you own should have at least one piece of security software installed. It may even be that several companies make a suite of internet security software. The most popular of these products is probably Norton Anti-Virus, but there are other products, like Internet Security, that can help protect your computer's operating system from harm. You'll know that you need internet protection software if you use the internet in a way that puts your computer at risk of danger. Some dangers you will experience include:

- Viruses. A virus is a computer program that is usually disguised as something else, like an email. Because viruses are so small, they can be transmitted over the internet just like email. It's important to be aware of these potential dangers because if a virus gets into your computer, it can do a whole host of things, like: cause your computer to be slower, show you pop-up ads, and even delete your files.
- Malware. Malware is a general term that refers to any program that does one of two things: either it infects your computer's operating system and makes it slow down, or it copies your personal information and sends it to another location. Malware can range from being very small, like the much-discussed "zombie computer" virus, to being very big, like the "Exhibit A" virus, which is capable of causing your computer to lock up.
- Spyware.

Spyware is the electronic equivalent of a stalker. It watches your computer screen and sends your information to the authorities. Most spyware is designed to steal your personal information, including your credit card numbers. Unlike viruses, spyware does not have to be transmitted over the internet. The best way to protect your computer from all types of internet

This article is based on a presentation given by the author at the 2002 Annual Meeting of the Association of Health Care Journalists, Washington, DC. The author examines the evidence to suggest that a competitive market-based approach is best suited to improving the cost and quality of health care in the United States. He argues that the emerging marketplace has been better equipped than government to manage these issues. Competition is based on the assumption that the market will increase choice and quality, and thereby reduce the cost of health care. Browse Articles Everyone has family members, friends, or acquaintances who have a health concern or that of someone they love. What is often a difficult and confusing decision is deciding which doctor or clinic to choose. If you are visiting a hospital, you will most likely be approached by a nurse or doctor who wants you to consider his/her practice. Make the best choice based on: What type of services are offered? How comfortable are you with the doctor/staff? Can you imagine that happening to you? Do they provide... The purpose of this article is to educate the readers about diseases of the bone and muscles. The diseases covered in this article are osteoporosis, osteopenia, muscle-bone diseases, non-traumatic fractures and muscular dystrophies, and muscular dystrophy. Osteoporosis is characterized by a decrease in bone mass and microarchitectural deterioration of bone tissue. The disease affects an estimated 20 million women and 10 million men over the age of 50 in the United States (the women figure representing one-half of all women)... If you are one of the many people with spinal cord injuries, you know that there is a tremendous amount of competition in getting a good job. The sad truth is that many employers will not even consider you for a job if you do not have a job or a steady work history. It can take years to learn new skills and to get back on your feet financially. It is important to begin your search for a job 77a5ca646e
