Different sources of funding for research and administration of a renal dialysis unit. A study of the funding source of a renal dialysis unit was undertaken to determine the nature of the relationships of patient care and research with the use of funding source by using a logistic regression analysis of a review of each year's funding source. The analysis was based on evaluations of the renal dialysis unit for its quality of clinical care and for its performance in research and administration. This study revealed that funding for research and administration is not affected by the funding source. However, funding for patient care is significantly affected by the source. The most important factor is the amount of patient care funding. Research and administration funding is related to the amount of patient care funding, although for research the effect is very small. The results suggest that the source of funding affects the method of allocating resources to the care of patients and research within the renal dialysis unit. is positive. p**(-79/8) Simplify
