Chad Goettl, Chad Goettl-new development project Buried in the notes for my most recent paper for this upcoming year's SES meeting, I read that many of the tools being developed for dynamic programming could be used for new model development and analysis. One such tool, STATAL2, seems to be a potential boon to those interested in developing new dynamic-programming models of insect-plant interactions. STATAL2 is an R package that allows the user to perform many mathematical operations involving discrete distributions through approximations to the desired quantity. For example, the package
