Keymacro is a free software program that allows you to simulate keyboard shortcuts on your desktop. You can assign a hotkey to almost any action you want to perform. For example, you can press CTRL+C to copy some files, CTRL+V to paste them, or, just as easy, CTRL+J to open a new browser tab. However, you need to keep in mind that most shortcuts need to be configured on a per-application basis. For example, if you want to open a new tab on Firefox, you need to assign CTRL+J to it. On the other hand, you need to use a different hotkey for Chrome. To sum it up, you may need to re-configure your shortcuts multiple times depending on what your computer is used for.

Keymacro Interface

Keymacro is a simple application that doesn't require any setup or configuration. This is a great start because it means you don't have to spend time trying to figure out a bunch of details before getting started. The interface is divided into 2 parts. The first one is a small panel on the top right of your desktop. Here, you can see all the apps you've installed and the number of windows they have open. Once you launch the application, you will see the main screen. This screen shows all the different shortcuts you can assign to your hotkeys. When you press the Ctrl key, you will get a pop-up box where you can add or configure a shortcut. You can also enter the number of keys you want to generate for the hotkey. On the bottom of the screen, there is a small button that lets you select a hotkey template. The template is meant to help you create your shortcuts as you go along. For example, you can use the hotkey to open a new tab on Google Chrome, which is CTRL+T. To make sure the shortcut is correct, you can test it by pressing the keys you assigned to it, and you'll see the dialog box pop up. Keymacro Configuration Keymacro comes with a wide range of shortcuts and templates. You can either add custom hotkeys for any application you want to use, or you can use templates like Gmail, Chrome, and others. The application can also automatically create hotkeys for applications you don't want to bother with. To do this, you need to add the hotkey to a template. For example, you can 1d6a3396d6
