Tools and ez-activator 2.0.1 final.Q: Flash/Flex AS3 - Saving/Loading XML Is there any way to make it so that I can save and load an XML as I do with any other file type? (I need to save various settings and settings to an XML). What I currently have is basically a bunch of classes that all end up being pretty much the same (though I would never be able to do them all at once so this is no problem). Everything I can find relates to saving and loading from the stage, whereas what I'm working on is more about XML Basically it's like this: Bold, Italic, Italic, Bold = when saving "Bold, Italic, Italic, Bold" is saved.

Bold and Italic = when saving "Bold and Italic" is saved. ...and so on. A: Yes, you can load XML and save it (obviously). In ActionScript, look at the mx.data.Xml class. It uses the writexml and loadxml functions to write/load. (You'll want to check the version of MXML/ActionScript to see what functions are available, though I believe this is the same version across the board.) This allows you to serialize/deserialize entire 'nodes' of XML as objects. Here's some code to save a 'node' of XML. Obviously, you'll want to do some error checking and recursively walk the whole tree before you call saveXML (which returns the XML string). // Save node as XML string. private function saveNode():void { // use xml to save object to string var xml:XML = xmlFactory.createXML(); xml.nodeName = "NewNodeName"; var node:XMLNode = xml.createElement("NewNode"); //... other properties here... // save as xml xml.writeText(String(node)); trace 3e33713323
