The technology enables all of the on-pitch animations to be precisely controlled by data. The technology will be enabled in the game in a variety of ways. For example, the game can change defensive tactics based on the player’s movement and position on the pitch and the team can also change formation and tactics based on the situation. The technology will also be used to create new animations and introduce new moves, such as a brand-new dive animation. An example is an outstretched arm at 90-degrees from the vertical to prevent the goalkeeper being able to parry a shot, an action that will now be animated. Players can also decide how to use the new animations based on their playing style. FIFA 22 introduces more than 40 new and unique player and team specific celebrations, visual cues, animations and new ways of interacting with the ball. FIFA 22 introduces "User Generated Content (UGC)," a new way for players to interact and customize the game. UGC allows them to upload their own skill animations, posters, players and team crests for their players to use in game. Each player can have his own customized player model, including player characteristics, skill animations and player crests. Players can also upload their own player photos into the game and customize their player models by changing their own photo. FIFA 22 introduces a new training mode that can be used before matches and during a match. The mode allows players to practice more specific actions like headers, footwork, team tactics, pressing, defending and free kicks, and is fully customizable in terms of which actions are practiced and where on the pitch they are practiced. Player Development FIFA 22 introduces an expanded player development system. Players will earn development points for a variety of actions taken, including touches, tackles, goals, assists, shots, and dribbles. The more points a player earns, the more he can advance through the six tiers of a player’s development tree. At the top of the tree is the age of 18, where players will develop naturally and have a maximum of four team attributes and four physical abilities. As players advance through the tiers, they will be able to choose and learn more attributes and improve their attributes. There are now a total of 27 attributes across three attributes types: attributes, physical and technical, with an
