The File > Open command opens a dialogue box for selecting an image file. Navigating to a location in the directory structure allows you to choose an image file from the My Computer window. Alternatively, open the Save for Web and Devices dialog box by selecting File > Save. Then select "Save for Web and Devices" from the menu on the bottom left of the window. If the image doesn't open, this is normally because the image file format is either unsupported or not supported by Photoshop. If the image does open in Photoshop then it may not have been saved in the correct format. Try saving again with higher quality. Photoshop doesn't work for the file type "JPG" (jpg). Photoshop can display the image. It cannot edit or modify the image. If Photoshop displays the image but cannot open the image or otherwise it doesn't do what you wanted it to do then the image is not a supported image format. How do I save a file? The Save or Save for Web & Devices dialog box allows you to save an image as either a TIFF or Photoshop PSD. The image file type you save determines how that file can be displayed when the image is opened. (A PSD file can only be viewed with Photoshop and a TIFF can only be viewed with Photoshop and other Adobe Creative Suite programs.) Note: Saving your image as a Photoshop PSD allows you to edit it with Photoshop, but editing the image is not recommended for inexperienced users. What file formats can I save an image in? The default file format is Photoshop PSD which is specific to the Photoshop program. It is a 32 bit tiff file with a master layer named "psd1". The file extension for saving a Photoshop PSD is ".psd". The file extension for saving a TIFF is ".tiff".

Pterygium surgery for recurrent graft failure following penetrating keratoplasty. To describe our clinical experience with pterygium surgery for recurrent graft failure after penetrating keratoplasty. Retrospective observational case series. All consecutive cases of pterygium surgery for recurrent graft failure following penetrating keratoplasty were retrospectively analyzed from January 1997 to December 2001. Seventy-four eyes of 64 patients (mean age 56.9 years) with recurrent pterygium undergoing pterygium surgery were included in the study. Among the group, 27 eyes (37%) had undergone previous penetrating keratoplasty. The median time from penetrating keratoplasty to pterygium surgery was 5.4 years. The pterygium was located at the nasal (34 eyes; 47%), temporal (26 eyes; 36%), and superior (8 eyes; 11%) quadrant. The pterygium location was the anterior (30 eyes; 42%) and posterior (22 eyes; 31%) cornea. The median follow-up was 3.2 years (range 1 to 8 years). Total excision of the pterygium, primary (15 eyes; 25%) or repeat (49 eyes; 75%) bare sclera graft for pterygium with or without conjunctiva grafting was the surgical procedure. Recurrent pterygium of the superior, nasal, or temporal quadrant occurred more frequently after penetrating keratoplasty ($P=0.04$). Twenty-four eyes of 22 patients (36%) required repeat pterygium surgery. Twelve of the 22 eyes (55%) had postoperative recurrent pterygium. Seven of these 12 eyes were associated with medial rotation of the lateral rectus muscle. In addition, recurrent pterygium occurred during the follow-up in five eyes. Recurrent pterygium associated with myogenic or neurogenic causes and extensive fibrovascular pterygium occurred as a sequela of penetrating keratoplasty. Surgical excision with primary or repeat bare sclera graft was the optimal surgical approach with a favorable outcome. Recurrent pterygium may develop following penetrating keratoplasty. Extensive fibrovascular pterygium may occur in subsequent follow-up. Factors that influence the diagnosis and management of non-small cell lung cancer. [The use of an artificial urethra in the treatment of male incontinence (author's transl)]. This paper presents a clinical-surgical study of the urethral membrane in the treatment of male urinary incontinence. After reviewing the literature and our own case series, the authors conclude that, in paraplegics and in cases of multiple sclerosis, the artificial urethra provides a new procedure of treatment that is still experimental. It is an effective solution for elderly patients. In young men with traumatic accident and other causes of urethral compression, there are better options that they deserve to be mentioned.
