that won't work in Photoshop Elements

If a plugin won't work in Photoshop Elements, we suggest you don't use it. 2. Incompatible features As with third-party plugins, you may find that one or more of the features of Photoshop Elements are not available when you try to use it. This includes features such as the ability to edit large images or create resized images in layers. If a feature is missing, or if you're unsure how to use the editor, we suggest you look at our article Getting started with Photoshop Elements to find out more. 3. Missing tips The Photoshop Elements tips panel can include information about using Photoshop Elements. When Elements first starts up, the tips panel will be empty. Use the following steps to add tips: Windows (all versions): Control Panel → Add/Remove programs → Photoshop Elements. Mac (all versions): Applications → Adobe Photoshop Elements. 4. Configure the brushes We recommend that you configure Photoshop Elements' brushes to your own preferences. We have prepared a library of brush presets, called the Brush Presets Library, which you can use to quickly get started. The Brush Presets Library is a free download: see our page. You can also configure your own brush presets as follows: On the Home tab, go to the Brush group. In the Available

Brushes section of the Brush panel, select the brush preset you want to use. You can browse the Brush Presets Library for other brush presets. You can change the brush's settings in the Brush panel.

5. Use the feature tool to select a feature in an image To make the feature tool easier to use when you're selecting a feature in an image, use one of the following steps:

Windows (all versions): Control Panel → Appearance & Personalization → Control Panel. Mac (all versions): Launchpad → View → [▶] Tools [▶] Brush Selection.

Q: Find the probabilities of rainfall greater than 2.5 inches A farmer is watching a gauge to make sure that rainfall does not exceed 2.5 inches within a given period. If he sees that rainfall exceeds 2.5 inches for one out of three days, what is the probability that the total amount of rainfall will exceed 2.5 inches during the entire four-day period of the flood? A: There are 3 days in which the rain can exceed 2.5 in . Out of these 3 days, one will be greater than 2.5 in and the other two will be less than 2.5 in (since one cannot be greater than the other by more than $2.5\text{ in}$). In other words, one day will be greater than $2.5\text{ in}$ and two days will be less than $2.5\text{ in}$.

By Bayes Rule: $P(X > 2.5) = 2P(X < 2.5)$

“We are connected to the water,” said Kuzma, “we are a small town.” So far, 16 cities and towns that were affected by the Levittown Flood (2013) have agreed to form the Levittown Recovery Community, which will be governed by a board of officials from each of those communities. “If we’re going to make Levittown better, we have to make it better,” said Kuzma. “Every year that we don’t do that is one year away from a new flood.” The effort is led by Levittown Mayor Wayne

Antonides, and includes members of the Levittown Town Council, the Levittown Board of Health and Levittown Alliance. Levittown Mayor Wayne Antonides (Photo by David Susac) “There’s a move to really make Levittown better

Q: SQL - How to add details into the output generated by one query I am doing a query to select distinct product names and the products count from a table. select product_name, count(*) count from order_details where order_date > '01-Dec-2013' and order_status = 'Placed' group by product_name product_name count

----- 500 2 101 1 But I need to add the details in the data. The output should be product_name count
count_customer_details

----- 500 2 cust_1 101
1 cust_2 How to get such a resultset? A:
Use a subquery select product_name, count, (select count(*) from order_details where order_date >
'01-Dec-2013' and order_status =
'Placed' and product_name = a.product_name) as count_customer_details from order_details a group by product_name
In general, you would not want to nest two queries like this. That would mean the query is only returning the data once. It's much better to have the second query be a subquery that is just returning something else. This is a rare situation, but it can be useful. The point is, that the result set of the outer query is not supposed to change. In this particular situation, that's not a problem.
