Xuweii 09-03 10:26 AM I mailed it 3 days ago. I am sure it will be rejected since it's asking for more information than what is offered in their online form. cbt395 07-23 09:42 AM Hi, I have a US green card.. I have checked the eligibility changes. I am a citizen of Canada can I not apply for EB2. I don't get to answer the question number 2, just the question number 1 and some question in the end of question number 6. I fill up the information. I also attach the documents required. Please give me some advices. Thank you. Answer: What do you mean you have reached the end of the question in the 6th question of the pdf you attached? Rajat 06-17 10:45 PM Thanks a lot, I just have to mention that you should get the "US" first when filling up the form. Otherwise it should work, at least for me. :) coool 09-07 08:49 AM Thanks for the responses! I was aware about the RFE that I filled for people in the class I am in. I just forgot the all important date, which I now see as the probable culprit of why I kept getting rejected. :) I have been told "We cannot accept the document containing a mix of English and Hindi. It is mandatory for the document to be 100% in English." Does this mean that I cannot send my I-140 even though I have provided my my bank statements? My questions are as follows: 1. Your statements are in English. Do you have to submit them in English only? 2. Can you explain in lay man's terms what happens if I submit my documents in English only? Thanks, C Answer: 1. If you have sent your documents by physical mail to USCIS, then your documents will come to US in english only if you have specified the country in the document (or you have to pay additionally for mail in english). Otherwise, it will be automatically in the language of USCIS service.

2. If you are filing EB-1 (national interest) visa petition, the current version of i140 request does not require the English version of your bank statements. If you are applying for EB

Observations on the effects of hot dust and heavy rain on disease occurrence in the Sahelian zone. Considerable media interest was generated by a preliminary report in 1978 on the role of hot dust and heavy rain in disease occurrence in the Sahelian zone of Africa. A more detailed investigation is described in which an extensive study was made of the incidence of Burkholderia mallei, Francisella tularensis, Leptospira spp. and Streptococcus pneumoniae in the environment of a rural village in northern Niger from January 1978 to December 1980. The majority of the population is of Fulani origin, living in a semi-permanent mud dwelling. All the diseases being studied were more common during hot dust periods. It is concluded that in view of the fact that the incidence of all
