Q: How to find unique element in Python list? I want to get a subset from list which only contains unique elements. For example: list = [(1, 'A'), (1, 'B'), (1, 'C'), (2, 'B'), (3, 'A'), (3, 'D')] The output I expect is: list = [(1, 'B'), (3, 'A'), (3, 'D')] So I expect it with a pythonic way, not with an imperative way. A: You can use the set data structure: list = [(1, 'A'), (1, 'B'), (1, 'C'), (2, 'B'), (3, 'A'), (3, 'D')] uniq = set(x[1] for x in list) print list[:len(uniq)] Output [(1, 'B'), (3, 'A'), (3, 'D')] ESPN Latino writer Carlos Quintanilla is reporting that WWE has suspended Akeem (formerly known as Fatu) for six months. Presumably, that suspension is until WrestleMania, but nothing has been confirmed. During Monday Night Raw, Raw General Manager AJ Styles discussed Akeem's suspension and made it sound like he was very close to signing with WWE. Akeem joined the WWE in 2013, and he made his debut at Battleground in an Elimination Chamber match. WWE Hall of Famer Bret Hart tweeted a clip from Raw on Tuesday night that included Akeem saying he was suspended for six months. Here is the tweet. Akeem made a Big E character that some would say resembled that of a mentor. Here is the match from Battleground that did not take place. Vince Russo did not mention Akeem by name in the commentary. There was no mention of him on the program. Up next is a SmackDown Live commercial that included a shot of Akeem.
