I have a Windows Form with a button. The button's click event is bound to a function, which starts a service. I decided to make the button into a web user control for the ease of implementation, so that the user can include the button on any form. The only problem is that in web user control, the button (as far as I know) has no such method as "fire_client_side_click_event". I tried the following method, but it doesn't work as I expect. function buttonClick(sender, args){ startService(); } 595f342e71
