Plot : Two young women set off to live in their grandfather's empty wooden house in the Danish countryside. One of them is having the worst time of her life, while the other is a little younger and a little more free spirited. Ujavalu is a play about circumstances which have transformed men and women. The play looks at the indigenous people of Sri Lanka in the light of their men's and women's respective lives post colonial traumatic situations. While at first, it seemed that the women's lives were not much different than the men's, we soon learn of the loss of tribal identities, of gender constructs and the loss of touch with the land, of knowledge and the ability to communicate, of rhythm and the loss of men and women living side by side and of being returned to the soil by the so called "Fathers of the Nation". If you thought that the healthcare industry was only about the traditional hospital, you were very much mistaken. Now, with the paradigm of healthcare transforming from hospital to home, the time when something else had to be done to this very good and all-round system. Now you have an opportunity to do something else. You have now seen, how the healthcare business is being transformed. Now you are ready to take a step towards the future of healthcare, towards the future of your family and of your community. You want to be able to interact with the health care system in the same way that you interact with the health care system today.

Healthcare is dying! Healthcare, that is an industry which is based on human behavior. Human behavior is all about emotions. So when I say that healthcare is dying, what I mean is that it is dying with all of the emotions which are related to that industry; as an industry, the industry is dying. Now why is it dying? Healthcare, you know, is a business with a customer base. Now, when you have a customer base with no emotional connection with your customer base, you are playing with fire

And so on... A: You cannot do it with sed, sed can only edit the lines where it is. What you can do is to use awk. You can simply remove the line that contains the keywords (i.e. the process would be: `awk '$0 ~ /2014/{close(f)}; /^[0-9\.:]$/ {f=$0} $0 ~ /2014/{print f}' infile.csv` if you want to replace them by a space, you could do: `awk '$0 ~ /2014/{close(f)}; /^[0-9\.:]$/ {f=$0} $0 ~ /2014/{print f}' infile.csv | sed's/ //' | sed's\(\.\)\1 /g'` The way I wrote above is the following: awk reads the file, the lines are filtered depending on the condition, and a file is redirected to the output if the line matches; sed removes the new lines because you want to print the original file but they are not needed anymore, the lines are separated by tab; sed finally adds tabs to the beginning and the end of the lines to make the text appear more tidy. This is all you need to do: the 3 commands. To demonstrate how awk works, we can use a simple example: `awk '$0 ~ /2014/{print $0}' infile.txt` $0 variable will hold the whole line (including `\r`) and the condition will be true if the whole line contains

2014, in this case $0 will contain something like: /2014/2014.01.14 00:00:00 start 2014.01.14 00:00:00 start since $0 will contain the whole line, printing just $0 would print the whole line which contains 2014. And now, when the condition is not true and it does not contain 2014, the line is printed. For your case, you could do: awk '$0 ~ /2014/{close(f)}; /^[0-9\:]*/ {f=$0} $0 ~ /2014/{print f}' infile.csv to d0c515b9f4
