Adobe Photoshop for online tutors is a free application that enables the user to design, edit, and create their own artwork. The word editor An editor is someone who edits another person's work. When we edit in Photoshop, we are editing our own work. When others see it, they see our edits, just as we see the original before we edit it. When we use the word photo-shop in a sentence, we are using this as a verb. We are describing what we do when we edit an image by making minor edits. From Edit to Duplicate When we make an edit, that edit is made only in one copy of the file. You are duplicating the entire photo and making a copy of it. Then, you can make any number of edits on that image until you have the look that you want. If you want to make small edits to a photo, you can make a duplicate, rotate the duplicate, crop the duplicate, merge a copy with another file, or even use some other effect on a duplicate copy. That way, you can make as many tiny edits as you need without making a new full copy of the image. Creating a new image from an existing image One reason a new image may not look like the original is that you may have edited your copy of the image and then cropped out a part of the picture. Crop the image to be the size you want and make your edits to that new, cropped image. You can use any of the editing tools to make your edits. Note that you may need to experiment to find the best size for your image. You may find that the size of the image is too big to work with after making all of your edits. Photoshop has a crop tool that enables you to crop the image to a specific size. You can also use the Crop tool in conjunction with a command that lets you resize the image to a specific size. The command you use depends on the size you want to make the image. To resize an image, select File⇒Image Size. Figure 6-2 shows how to resize an image to 50 percent of its current size, making the image 50 percent the size of the original image. The crop tool enables you to crop a specific area of the photo. Figure 6-3 shows the steps to crop the image to a particular size. To use the crop tool, select the Crop tool.

Q: Write a function that allows the first element of a list to be changed I need to write a function that takes a list and a number of elements as arguments and allows the first element of the list to be changed. So I can have a list like: `a = ['x', 'y', 'z']` and function can change the first element to 'o'. The function should return the whole list. In case the function doesn't work, I will need to know the name of the function because I have many functions of the same sort (also with parameters that I can't easily generalize) A: When you find yourself writing "just define a function", you probably should use the built-in function: `>>> a = ['x', 'y', 'z'] >>> a.insert(0, 'o') >>> a` `['o', 'y', 'z']` Note that functions like `len` and any are more efficient in Python, since they have a particular data structure in memory for the list. You could make your own more functional-minded function using `islice()`, the slice notation, etc., but you'd lose out on these benefits. Your specific problem has a very simple solution: `def change_first(alist, num_elements): return alist[:num_elements] + (num_elements,)\alist[num_elements:]` Of course you could use a loop or similar to build up the new list, but the slice notation here is very nice. Q: Why does taxicab's usage decrease in the most recent times? I read somewhere that cab-hailing app like Uber, Lyft etc are growing in usage because they provide cheaper taxi services, not only ride on one journey, but also to the travellers regularly. Why do we see a decrease in taxi use? A: Taxi's use has been declining because taxis are better able to communicate, and even offer innovative services. Taxi's are moving away from being taxis and becoming service and delivery vehicles. Taxi's are slowly disappearing from our lives as they become luxury, and we drive to the Tuk Tuk for a drink or
