President Hassan Rouhani was reelected earlier this month, capping a reformist presidency that has lifted Iranians out of poverty. But despite Rouhani's promise of change and new relations with the West, new US President Donald Trump has vowed to "decertify" the Iran nuclear deal, effectively ending it. Rouhani and other Iranian officials have made clear they will not renegotiate the deal, and are prepared to revert to a nuclear weapons programme if sanctions imposed by the UN Security Council are lifted. In this File photo, US President Donald Trump, walks with Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe during the Japan-U.S. Summit in Yokohama. (Photo by AFP) On Tuesday, the state-run IRNA news agency quoted Rouhani as saying "we are ready to discuss all our issues, including the nuclear deal, at any time". "We have no problem discussing our issues. If they [the United States] are ready to discuss all issues, including the nuclear issue, we are ready to discuss all our issues, including the nuclear issue, at any time," Rouhani said. Iran in July will surpass a 3.67% uranium enrichment level, which would indicate that they may go back to producing highly enriched uranium, which the West fears will be used to make nuclear weapons. 'Iran, the country of science and technology' Rouhani said Iran had signed several agreements with Russia, China, South Korea and the US, but did not specify which, and added that "Iran, the country of science and technology, is ready to sign more agreements with countries". "The time for trilateral engagement (Russia, China, US) has passed," he said. European nations have said they are determined to keep the nuclear deal alive. Earlier on Tuesday, the foreign ministry in the German capital, Berlin, accused the Trump administration of seeking to "drag out the life of a landmark agreement with Iran

Guide to install Xpadder with a profile for Call of Duty 4: Modern Warfare. Episode 9, Modern Warfare 3 version. Guides, FAQ, and.Q: SQL Server : optimise an inner join to prevent duplicate I have a table of events which has two columns: one is a transaction ID, and one is an occurrence. In this case an event is said to occur once per transaction Why? Because if it did not occur the column "occurrence" would not be NULL. I have data as shown in the diagram below: I want to run a query that will return only the rows with a match in the ID and occurrence columns but to prevent duplication. If someone could help with a query and or a statement I would be much appreciated. A: You can use a LEFT JOIN for this: SELECT * FROM events LEFT JOIN occurrences ON events.id = occurrences.id WHERE (events.occurrence IS NULL OR events.occurrence = occurrences.occurrence) This should remove the duplicates. Long-term outcomes of percutaneous septal ablation for hypertrophic obstructive cardiomyopathy: An era-modified analysis. Percutaneous septal ablation is emerging as an alternative treatment option for some patients with hypertrophic obstructive cardiomyopathy (HOCM). We sought to determine long-term outcomes of isolated septal ablation among a large series of patients with HOCM. Twenty-nine percutaneous septal ablation procedures in patients with HOCM performed between January 2014 and March 2016 were included in this retrospective analysis. Progression of HOCM was determined by changes in intraventricular septal angle (IVSA) and the 6-minute walk test (6MWT) from baseline to final follow-up. Patients were followed-up from 1 to 6 years. The size of the ablation was based on the average IVSA and maximum systolic gradient (MSG). Twelve (41%) patients had a single ablation and 17 (59%) patients had two or more ablations. Six patients underwent both septal ablation and alcohol septal ablation. Of 29 ablation procedures, 20 patients (69%) completed follow-up. Mean IVSA increased by 1.26 degrees (p = 0.004) from
