Before you open Photoshop, prepare the artwork that you want to use. Set the basic settings to their default values and ready your art to be edited. Set the lines, curves, and fills to their defaults, as explained in the following sections. Set the color settings

Most images that you work with will have a color scheme set when you open them. Make sure that your artwork reflects that color scheme. If you have a lot of similar colors in your file, you can use the Info panel (View⇒Window⇒Info) to set the color scheme. Before you open Photoshop, use the Color Mode drop-down list (in the palette above the drawing area) to set the color mode for your file. Figure 13-1 shows the Color Mode drop-down list for the file we create in this book. (You can see the same screen when you're working in Photoshop Elements or Photoshop CS5 for Windows.) Figure 13-1: Choose a color mode before you start the editing process. You can use Elements' Spot Color feature to apply colors to objects in your image. Press Shift+Ctrl+S (Shift+⌘-S on the Mac) to access the Spot Color dialog box. You can set up your basic file so that when you load the file into an application, you see the type of colors you have, or create any other color schemes if you want. A good way to do this is to create a layer group in Photoshop, and then use that layer group to contain the type of color scheme you want to use for all your images. A layer group (refer to Figure 13-1) is made up of one or more layers. You can use layer groups

Robert A. BLAIR,
Plaintiff-Appellant, v. STATE OF OHIO, and William Seibert, Defendants-Appellees. No. 90-4095. United States
Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit. Jan. 30, 1991. Before BOYCE F. MARTIN, Jr. and RYAN, Circuit Judges, and CONTIE, Senior Circuit Judge. ORDER 1 This case has been referred to a panel of the court pursuant to Rule 9(a), Rules of the Sixth Circuit. Upon examination of the record and briefs, this panel unanimously agrees that oral argument is not needed.

Fed.R.App.P. 34(a). 2 Robert A. Blair appeals from the district court's grant of summary judgment in favor of the defendants in this civil rights action brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. Secs. 1983 and 1988. The defendants are the State of Ohio, and William Seibert, a police detective. Blair alleged that he was arrested in violation of his constitutional rights.

Upon consideration, we find no error in the district court's decision. 3 The undisputed facts establish that Blair had been charged with possession of marijuana. The arresting police officer was sent to the home of Blair's girlfriend pursuant to the warrant. Upon arrival, the police officer was met by the girlfriend, who informed the officer that her boyfriend had just left. The girlfriend informed the police officer that she was unable to produce Blair's beeper number, but that she did know of Blair's current whereabouts. The police officer then informed the girlfriend that he intended to wait for Blair outside her home to question him regarding the marijuana. The girlfriend then informed the officer that Blair was in the bathroom. 4 The arresting officer went to the bathroom, where Blair was seated, and arrested him. Blair told the officer that he had been smoking marijuana, but that he did not have any on his person. The police officer then searched Blair, and found a small bag of marijuana in his coat pocket. 5 After

T-lymphocyte responses and cervical lymph node cells in mouse immunosuppression due to phenolic tannin-enriched herbal medicine. A mixture of nutmeg seed powder and gingerseed powder was used as a candidate for an herbal medicine. The mixture was reported to inhibit T-cell responses in mice by intravenous (i.v.) injection. Phenolic constituents were found to be the active substance(s) of the tannin-enriched herbal medicine by liquid chromatography/mass spectrometry (LC/MS) analyses. Herein, we compared cell-mediated immunity (CMI) response with phenolic tannin-enriched herbal medicine and conventional anti-tumor agent, cyclophosphamide. Our results showed that the herbal medicine and cyclophosphamide reduced T-lymphocyte proliferation, CD4+ and CD8+ T-cell subsets, but the herbal medicine was more effective than cyclophosphamide. The herbal medicine also inhibited the peripheral T-lymphocyte in draining lymph nodes. Furthermore, the herbal medicine and cyclophosphamide suppressed IFN-gamma and IL-2 production by CD4+ T-lymphocytes in draining lymph node cells, while the herbal medicine was more effective than cyclophosphamide. Moreover, the herbal medicine was effective in inducing a Th1 type cytokine balance (IFN-gamma > IL-10 > TNF-alpha) of draining lymph node cells by i.v. injection. It was suggested that the herbal medicine might inhibit T-cell responses due to inhibition of cell proliferation and cytokine production and induction of a Th1 type cytokine balance. The herbal medicine might be suitable for immunostimulation in humans. For $55,000 you can now own a Cadillac CTS-V Hellcat's bitter (and refreshing) rival, the Hyundai Veloster Turbo. Make no mistake about it, the Veloster Turbo is a very fast coupe. In fact, it's so fast that the acronym is often used to describe it in the American media. The first-generation Veloster Turbo gets up to 62 mph (100 km/h) in five seconds, a time no other hatchback can match. But as fast as that is, it's not nearly as fast as the much more expensive Cadillac CTS-V, which is on sale for $89,000. That's a lot of money for the performance of a slightly smaller
