A principal problem with the use of such techniques is that the slide shifter is extremely effective for a relatively small portion of the scan. However, the slides are primarily used in the determination of a relatively small band of the total required area. This causes the remaining portion of the scanned area to have very little or no signal content for use in the creation of the masks for the remaining portion. In other words, the main utility of the scanner resides in the small band portion of the picture, not the entire picture. The present invention is aimed at providing an improved scanner system wherein the scanning section is moved continuously from one end of the original to the other in a way that avoids the necessity of slow,
