A Google Search (Romana)

A search engine that shows you recent search results and automatically creates a calendar view of your search terms with the top 50 search results. Open Source Package Installation instructions: Extract the archive into your Google Search Engine directory which is this: /path-to-google-engine/ You will need to create a /users/ namespace/ folder inside that directory as shown in the screenshot below. Run gserviceaccount.py -o /path-to-google-engine -t namespace.calendar for this. Copy the published calendar Run python -m xmlrpclib.client -d /path-to-google-engine -U to access the published calendar. Note: If you don't have root privileges, you will have to start as a service or run as 'google_calendar', which starts with the wheel user. Setting up the widget: A.html file should be provided in your google search engine. Entering '/search box/' in the html file and replacing 'search_box' with your search box ID. This is done in the url path for the widget. Note: If the widget has been converted to a.css file, this must be used in place of the above. Enabling the widget: At 'Google Search Engine Preferences' (otherwise this is disabled by default) Please add your Google Search Engine name to be displayed as the widget. Converting the widget to a.css file: To make your search engine usable with the widget, you must convert the existing.html file to a.css file. a) Edit searchbox.search.css. b) Use the search box variables provided by the Google Search Engine service. c) Edit searchbox.search.html. d) Set the variables in the searchbox.search.html file as per the variables available in the.css file. Added some fixes, Fixed the bug with making a goog search with plural or singular with apostrophes. I've made it possible to add another feed, so we can display the earliest result in the google search results below the later ones. I've added other customizations as well, but most of them can't be discussed in this comment
